National Knowledge Exam (NKE)

ACCOMMODATION HANDBOOK FOR WRITERS

Information for Accessibility and Accommodations Requests for NKE Writers

Introduction

Writers with protected characteristics (e.g., disability, family status, religion) are entitled under provincial human rights legislation to reasonable accommodation in testing arrangements that provide for fair and valid assessment. CPHR Canada will consider any testing accommodation requests while ensuring the integrity of the National Knowledge Exam (NKE) and ensuring that the NKE tests the required competencies. CPHR Canada supports reasonable and appropriate modifications to the NKE in order to accommodate writers under the applicable human rights legislation.

The accommodations provided should not place the writer with protected characteristics at an advantage or disadvantage in undertaking the NKE as compared to non-accommodated individual.

Accessibility and Special Accommodation

Through its provincial associations, CPHR Canada provides reasonable one-time accommodations to writers who have documented disabilities (physical, mental or learning impairments) within the definition provided by the Human Rights Code. The accommodations granted are valid for one examination session only. Writers must submit a new request for any future examination session and may need to supply additional documentation upon submitting a request for a subsequent exam (including if writers choose to defer their registration to a future sitting).

Accommodation requests are assessed on a case-by-case basis to ensure equal opportunity for writers to fully demonstrate their qualifications without altering the nature or level of the qualification being assessed. CPHR Canada will consider each case after carefully reviewing the submitted documentation. However, submitting a request does not guarantee receiving an accommodation.

All requests and documentation must be submitted to the provincial member association at the time of exam registration or, if not received at the time of registration, by the exam registration deadline. Requests for pre-existing conditions that are made following the registration deadline will not be accepted. In exceptional circumstances where an unexpected circumstance arises, a request for accommodation may be considered after the deadline but cannot be guaranteed.

Examples of special accommodations that may be provided:

- Permitting timed rest breaks during the exam (if more than the two washroom breaks that are provided are required).
- Allowing a medical device in the examination room, such as an inhaler or diabetic equipment.
- Access to food/snacks due to medical condition.
- Possibility of having a reader or scribe/typist.
- Increasing time permitted for the examination.
- Washroom breaks required due to medical condition (if more than the two washroom breaks that are provided are required).
- Access to a separate room.

Documentation

Where the accommodation request relates to disability, supporting documentation and information satisfactory to CPHR Canada must be provided to the provincial exam coordinator by a qualified regulated health care professional (see examples in chart below). The qualified regulated health professional must have specific training and expertise with respect to the condition(s) for which accommodation is being requested and be certified or licensed to practise in their field.

The documentation provided should confirm the existence of a disability and describe in detail the impact of the disability as it relates to completing the NKE, the writer's specific needs and the proposed accommodation, with an explanation of how the requested accommodation will mitigate the impact of the disability in completing the NKE.

Application Process

All accommodation requests must be submitted by the writer to the provincial member association at the time of exam registration or, if not at the time of registration, by the exam registration deadline.

Writers are responsible for covering any cost of obtaining the required supporting documentation from a qualified health professional.

Failure to provide requests and required documentation by the deadline may result in the rejection of a request. Plan ahead, as appointments with many health professionals are not easy to obtain and obtaining the necessary documentation may be a lengthy process.

All requests will be reviewed by CPHR Canada. CPHR Canada will attempt to meet all reasonable requests, however, submitting a request does not guarantee receiving an accommodation. Writers will receive confirmation from their provincial member association regarding the status of their request.

For exams being conducted in test centres, CPHR Canada reserves the right to assign writers to a test centre where the applicable accommodation(s) can be offered which may require travel (including related expenses).

Appendix A: Learning and Cognitive Disabilities Guidelines

If you are seeking accommodations due to a cognitive or learning disability, or due to a neurological disorder that affects your cognitive abilities, you must submit a comprehensive psychoeducational assessment report or neuropsychological assessment report as part of the accommodation request in order for your case to be fully reviewed.

The psychoeducational or neuropsychological assessment should include clinical findings.

- The applicant must be an adult when testing is done. In most cases, this means testing has been conducted when the applicant was at least 18 years of age or within the past five years.
- The testing must be performed by a qualified professional. Documentation should include the professional's academic credentials and qualifications that allows them to confirm the nature of the disability and make an accommodation recommendation based on the nature of the NKE.
- The testing must include a battery of tests. It is not acceptable for the professional to administer only one test, nor is it acceptable for the professional to base a diagnosis on only one of several subtests.

The documentation provided by the professional should:

- Provide actual test scores and standard scores and percentiles on an age-adjusted, rather than education-adjusted, norm. It is helpful to list the test data in a summary score sheet.
- Document the impact of the disability on the applicant's ability to write the NKE. Test results should clearly support this claim.
- Include clear and specific evidence and identification of the nature of the disability. Individual "learning styles" and "learning differences" do not by themselves constitute a learning disability. It is important that the assessment rule out alternative explanations for problems in learning, such as emotional or attention problems that may interfere with learning but do not, in and of themselves, constitute a disorder in learning.
- Explain why each recommended accommodation is necessary, referring to specific test results or clinical observations. We will consider recommended accommodations that give the test writer a fair chance.
- List current medications and existing (not possible) side effects that may impact your ability to write the exam.

Appendix B: Physical and Systemic Disabilities Documentation Guidelines

Physical and systemic disabilities have a definitive physical cause and can significantly restrict a test writer's physical ability to write the NKE under standard conditions.

Supporting documentation must be comprehensive and current. Professionals conducting assessments and making recommendations for appropriate accommodation(s) must be those who are qualified to do so. The documentation provided:

- Should discuss functional limitations caused by the disability and its impact on the applicant's ability to write the NKE under standardized conditions.
- Should list current medications and existing (not possible) side effects that may impact the applicant's ability to write the exam.
- Should recommend accommodation(s) to compensate for the identified functional limitations.
